Robert McGregor

- Consistent with the National English Curriculum Framing Paper, ie, 'The goal of teaching grammar ... should centre on ... clearer expression of thought, more convincing argumentation, more careful logic in reasoning, more coherence, precision, and imagination in speaking and writing, and knowing how to choose words and grammatical and textual structures that are more appropriate to the audience or readership.'
- Fourteen units for Years 7–11 explicitly focused on a wide range of grammatical features within a variety of authentic contexts and tasks.
- Explicitly aimed at developing expressive, competent and accurate use of language.
- Using investigative, collaborative and reflective strategies for effective, durable learning.
